

Lynette Copp

September 27, 1958 - May 1, 2016

Lynette Denise Washington-Copp

Nothing set the tone for Lynette like a good song. It was often accompanied by an even better homemade cocktail. However, even more than music, Lynette loved getting together with her loved ones at family events such as BBQ's, graduations and birthdays. Those were some of Lynette's happiest times. You might have been randomly awoken by a Facebook message from Lynette with her simply wondering how you were doing. Lynette was the epitome of what we would call a "social butterfly".

If you asked Lynette, she was also a self-proclaimed Fashionista. Even though it would be 2016, she would show up to your event in a 1958 faux cheetah print, just ask her cousin, Jermaine Carter.

Although she wasn't the most athletic person, she loved her sports. She especially loved her Mets and tennis. Your phone calls would go unanswered if you called while Serena was playing tennis. No matter the time of day, Lynette would turn all the T.V.'s in the house to watch tennis; despite what everyone else in the house REALLY wanted to watch.

Lynette was born to Joseph Ellis Washington and Joan Washington on September 27th, 1958 in Brooklyn, New York. Lynette attended Boys and Girls High School in Brooklyn, NY and received her Associate's degree from the College of Staten Island. Lynette later retired from the state of New York at the Brooklyn Development Center.

Lynette is survived by her mother, Joan Washington and her brother, Jeffery Washington. Lynette's legacy will carry on through her three children Tawanna Nicole Styles, Taylor Ellis Copp and Andrew Joseph Copp. She leaves behind her loving husband Brett Andrew Copp, her aunt Jeanette, her cousins; Adele, Jermaine, Dawanna, Elaughn, Nepheta, Raquel, Richard, Curtis, and Tammy. Lynette also leaves her nephew Joell, her nieces Lula and Jordan. She will be missed by her God-children Shannon Richardson and Akil Jones as well as numerous cousins, extended family and close friends.

“ My deepest sympathies to all. I am so sorry to hear of Lynette's passing. It saddens me greatly. I will never forget meeting her at central bus station with her six year old AJ , he was going to Massachusetts for two weeks to stay at my house. She was more nervous then he was. I would of been too sending my six year old off. But we always made it work whether he had summer school or football. She was a great lady, wife, mother, friend.

AJ, I'm so sorry you have lost your mom at such a young age. Make her proud.
My thoughts are with you at this time

“ Memory:

I had just wrapped up a semester of school, and I stopped by the house to check in on AJ. I forgot it was Shannon's bday so he wasn't home. I lived on the other side of the island and it cost me $20 to get there, so I was definitely going to hang out for an hour. But then we got to talking. We were cracking jokes and opening up to each other as we were watching a college basketball game for one of her relatives. So one hour turned to two, then three,--then my mom called to check in on me since she expected me to be home hours before. Even though we had a 35 year age gap, we had a blast. And that's what Mrs. Lynette embodied--fun and laughter. It was just me and Mrs. Lynette hanging out in the kitchen. She made salmon croquettes and collard greens and we ate dinner together (plus she was giving me more food). I was like "Mrs. Lynette this is so much food." She laughed and said, "Haha, I gotta take of you, ok! Your mother is gonna know I fed her child!"

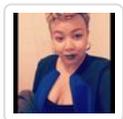

It was hilarious because she started roasting AJ for being out so long. She said something like, "I'm mad. I told that boy not to go out." Shortly after, I was getting ready to leave and then she said, "You know what, we're gonna prank him. Go upstairs to his room, make yourself comfortable. If he can be out so long, he's gonna drive you home. Uh huh, psh. You're not takin a cab home." We gave each other high fives, had a girl power moment, and cracked more jokes. So that's exactly what we did, we hung out in AJ's room eating fruit until he came in.

And of course there was no way he wasn't driving me home :).

Definitely held Mrs. Copp dear to my heart. I will miss her vivacious and loving spirit, and I wish I would have spent even more time with her. I will make her proud like I would my own mother.

“ We reconnected after losing touch for more than 29 years, but it was just like we had seen each other yesterday. We traveled to Connecticut to R. Kelly concert and had a blast. That was part of the celebration of life after my bout with breast cancer. RIP my sister. It did not take you, you simply went on home. Much love and prayer for Brett and the family. Oh how she loved her family. Now you have your own Angel to watch over you.
